600 HORSES

For Sue Freese, that ah ha moment happened when she retired in Sun City West, AZ and took clay classes 18 years ago. After learning the basics of creating in clay, her imagination took over and her whimsical clay horses have become collector items scattered around the country and beyond. “My inspiration is the smiles these horses bring to the faces of people looking at them and the kind words they say to me,” explained Freese, who has created over six hundred horses.

People take their time choosing a horse by looking at each expression. Then they fall in love with one and my horse has a new home.
